

To whom does energy belong?

The TRESOC Rainbow Share Issue

By Matt Harvey

To whom does energy belong
The energy that's everywhere?
To you, to me, to anyone
Who'll back TRESOC and buy a share

It flows from those who engineer
The means, put physics to the test
Tap elements from far and near,
To all those willing to invest –

Invest in schemes and sweet techniques
Both cutting edge and nothing new
For modern geeks and Ancient Greeks
Admire an Archimedes Screw

The spin-off of the river's flow
A silver lining of the cloud
Discreet skim from the sun's warm glow
Embezzlement that is allowed

Afraid don't be to use the Force
It's ethical as you could wish
And close at hand and free at source
It's clean, it's green, it's kind to fish

Affords the fuel-poor, cash-strapped
(Whose rooftops catch the solar rays)
A benefit that can't be capped
Except by clouds and shorter days

For when it shines and when it pours
– On one or both we can depend –
The good accrues to you and yours
When you're TRESOC's all-weather friend

So join the push to prime the pump
Put pounds and pennies in the pot
Prepare to take the plunge and jump
And generate the Megawatt!

Ensure this share floatation floats
– A buoyancy aid for everyone –
Unfurl your twenty-one pound notes
Step up, plunge in, splash out, shine on
